

Wollotuka Institute draws strength from our culture

THE University of Newcastle's Wollotuka Institute supports the most comprehensive range of Indigenous programs in Australia.

Located on the Callaghan campus, the institute is housed in a uniquely designed learning space – the Birabahn building – which was developed to incorporate aspects of Indigenous practices and culture to present staff, students and the community with a warm familiar environment.

Wollotuka is committed to the advancement and leadership of Indigenous education at a local, national and global level.

Courses

The institute offers undergraduate, postgraduate coursework and Higher Degrees by Research and undertakes high-quality research grounded in reciprocity with our communities.

Wollotuka conducts Indigenous programs and research that connect Indigenous knowledge, innovation,

Wollotuka conducts Indigenous programs and research that connect Indigenous knowledge, innovation, entrepreneurship and leadership so graduates are better prepared to sustainably influence cultural and social change.

entrepreneurship and leadership so graduates are better prepared to sustainably influence cultural and social change.

This unique combination of education, research and innovation enables the institute to offer programs in critical Indigenous studies with local, national and global perspectives.

It continues to draw strength from culture, communities and past journeys.

The institute plays a vital role in representing and supporting Indigenous Australians studying at university.

Through their work, Wollotuka and the University of Newcastle are regarded as leaders in Indigenous education in Australia.

Programs

Wollotuka and the University of Newcastle offer a range of programs including the Yapug Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Enabling Program which is designed for Indigenous students aged 17 years and older as an option for entry to studying at the University of Newcastle.

The teaching and professional staff who manage the academic programs are passionate and committed to the advancement of Indigenous education.

Assistance

The institute provides assistance to both prospective and current Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander students in seeking and applying for scholarships and accommodation, both within and outside of the University of Newcastle.

Wollotuka takes a holistic approach to engaging with Indigenous students and supporting their experience at the University of Newcastle.

The Institute's staff, with outstanding educational and personal qualifications, support the aspirations of Indigenous students while recognising cultural differences and valuing the diversity of cultural backgrounds.

More information

For more information on the Wollotuka Institute and available courses and programs, visit newcastle.edu.au/wollotuka

NEW NEEDS YOU

The University of Newcastle is proud to announce the new Bachelor of Global Indigenous Studies starting in 2019. Supported by our world-renowned Wollotuka Institute and using Indigenous knowledge systems, you'll learn to work effectively with local and global communities to tackle social, economic and ecological challenges.

This degree is available to study online or face-to-face at our Newcastle (Callaghan) campus, and students studying this degree can access a number of support services and resources to help ensure success.

FIND OUT MORE NEWCASTLE.EDU.AU/BGIS

