Tom mixes two passions

NSW North Coast surfer and musician Tom Avery is in the middle of a busy schedule, but one that he loves – competing in longboard events and playing gigs.

He is in New Zealand at an event that combines both – competing in the Duke New Brighton Festival of Surfing near Christchurch, and performing on stage at the festival’s closing celebrations.

The Duke New Brighton Festival of Surfing is put together by the New Brighton Pier and Foreshore Society and helps raise community spirit and participation in the east of Christchurch.

It has national and South Island-wide sanctioning and recognition, and runs from March 17-26.

Avery told the Koori Mail he would be surfing the 9ft open and the logger division (single-fin Malibus 9ft and over) and playing at the closing concert.

“I’m super excited to be travelling back to the country where my mum and sisters were born. I know the surf pumps in NZ and the people are so welcoming,” he said.

“I will be travelling with my Moori brother Dan Croskery and also with a photographer from Australian surf magazine Pacific Longboarder, so I will get a few photos and an article in the mag.”

Last month Avery finished second in the Wandyiyali Indigenous Surf Classic at Newcastle behind surf legend Robbie Page. Also in the final was Jamie Archibold and Matt Maloney.

“The Wandyiyali is the first event for the year and is always a great time to catch up with my saltwater brothers and sisters from all over Oz.”

More recently, Avery finished 11th at a Noosa surfing competition where he was up against surfers from Hawaii, Japan and Australia.

He has recently gained sponsorship from Byron Bay surfboard maker Ed Sinnott and now proudly surfs boards with a resin tint of red, black and yellow.

“Proud of colours “My boards look unreal and I’m so proud to have our colours on my new spears (boards),” he said.

On stage, Avery will be appearing in his first international performance as Blakboi.

His music will take him to New Zealand, Canada and Hawaii, in addition to gigs in Perth, Melbourne and Tasmania.

“I can’t wait to play my music overseas. It is really groovy to think that my dream of becoming a world-class performer is coming true. I guess the saying ‘follow your dreams’ is true.”

“The best thing though is playing my tunes while still dripping wet.”

Blakboi has played live for five years in pubs, clubs and festivals.
