The Native Title Party is the holder of the Native Title Application shown below under the Native Title Act 1993 (Qld).
Peris, Williams, playing for Australia, but in different teams

ASH Taylor insists he never gave a National Rugby League (NRL) return to Brisbane serious thought, saying his chance to own Gold Coast’s fortunes was the reason for staying put.

Taylor last week signed a three-year extension with the Titans, worth $1 million a season, in a show of faith that will see the 22-year-old at the club until at least 2021.

The Broncos were keen on luring the halfback to Red Hill, with one NRL appearance in 2015, once off contract with Gold Coast next season.

But Taylor says a move north would have been a mistake and that he was happy to re-sign before rival clubs could enter the race to secure him on November 1.

“I didn’t really think about that; it wasn’t really an option for me,” he said about a possible Broncos approach.

“There’s lots of key players there and they couldn’t really fill me in the system.

“Obviously Wayne (Bennett) wanted me back there, as we saw in the media, but I just don’t think that was the best option for me.”

While admitting the halfback still had a lot of work to do, new coach Garth Brennan anointed the Toowoomba product as the man to “own” the team and deliver a premiership.

It is a massive investment in a player entering just his third NRL season, but Brennan has a high opinion of Taylor having served as his private mentor for the last 18 months.

“At the end of the day, your halfback needs to own the football team, and it’s time for Ash to say, ‘You’re the halfback; take control,’” Brennan said.

“I think he is (capable of leading the Titans to a premiership) … the spotlight’s going to be on him now, with that contract signed, but I’m sure he’ll embrace it and be the kind of person that can handle that.”

Taylor said Brennan’s arrival was a massive factor in his decision and that of him taking control of the struggling club was “all part of the process”.

“That was a big decision in making my decision: Garth being coach,” Taylor said.

The club has made no secret of its urgency to retain the man they see as the future of their club with Titans boss Graham Annesley missing a chance to trumpet Taylor’s potential last week.

“I think he can go on and be one of the most outstanding players in the game over the next seven, eight, nine years,” Annesley said.

Peris was a late call-up to the Australian squad for that tournament, but Williams was out injured.

Coach Paul Gaudoin praised the next generation of Hockeyroos after his team claimed the Oceania Cup with a hard-fought 2-0 win over New Zealand in Sydney.

The victory ensures the women’s national team is likely to retain fifth spot in the world rankings, one slot ahead of theirs-Tasman rivals.

Gaudoin said the development of their squad was key ahead of the Commonwealth Games and World Cup next year.

Earlier, the Hockeyroos claimed a morale-boosting 2-1 victory over New Zealand ahead of the Oceania Cup final where they again beat the Black Sticks. Peris scored one of Australia’s two goals.
