You'll be given the opportunity to challenge yourself, build on your skills, and make a significant contribution to a workplace that's filled with energetic and inspiring people. Talent thrives here – and so do truly satisfying careers.

About Us

The Monash Country Lines Archive (MCLA) began in 2011 to work in partnership with Indigenous Australian communities in their language preservation. Through the use of 3D animation, MCLA is able to reengage and revitalise interest in language continuation, by reconnecting language and its people.

The Opportunity

A rewarding opportunity exists for an experienced Project Manager to manage animation projects from conception to final delivery with significant impact on indigenous communities. You will have the privilege of reporting to the Deputy Director who is a talented linguist and fluent in several aboriginal languages as you enable Indigenous stories and languages come to life.

Working closely with stakeholders in both urban and remote environments, you will be responsible for sourcing and assigning project resources, managing the implementation of project deliverables, as well as preparing reports and presentations for an array of audiences. The result is a true collaboration that records the past, preserves the present, and protects Indigenous languages and knowledge into the future.

If you have strong project and budget management experience, with an affinity to help give continuing life to indigenous Australian languages, then we strongly encourage you to apply.

At Monash University, we are committed to being a Child Safe organisation. This position requires the incumbent to hold a valid Working with Children Check.
