

The Australian Bureau of Statistics (ABS) has identified 4 positions in our 2019 Graduate Development Program as positions specifically for Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander graduates.

There is a variety of roles on offer such as working on the 2021 Census, in 'corporate' roles (e.g. Finance, Policy & Legislation, Human Resources), plus our general streams of Statistical Analysis and Research, Methodology, and Information and Communications Technology.

Our Graduate Development Program is a 9 month program that provides practical on-the-job training through team based work or projects. All ABS graduates are engaged as permanent employees on successful completion of the Graduate Development Program.

What we offer

- positions located in every state and territory capital city
- competitive remuneration package starting at $57,438 (plus 15.4% superannuation)
- opportunities for learning and development
- advancement on successful completion of the program
- flexibility to achieve a healthy work / life balance
- on-the-job learning including projects, workshops, guest speakers and work specific events, and other learning and development activities designed to meet your individual needs.

In addition to these career and development opportunities, the ABS offers attractive employment conditions including annual leave, personal leave and paid Christmas shutdown. If you are required to move from your home State/Territory the ABS will cover your relocation costs.
