

“One APS Career...Thousands of Opportunities”

As one of Sydney’s most visited museums, the Australian National Maritime Museum (ANMM) is committed to being a world leader in maritime history, sharing the national maritime story across Australia and providing a must-visit museum experience.

- Attractive remuneration package and employment conditions
- Ongoing full-time
- APS 6, $72,146 – $84,534 plus 15.4% superannuation
- One of Australia’s leading Museums located waterside in beautiful Darling Harbour

We are looking for an enthusiastic and experienced individual with an outstanding ability to build and develop excellent relationships to join our Research and Curatorial team. This position contributes to maintaining strong relationships with the Royal Australian Navy, Department of Veterans Affairs and other external stakeholders. The position holder is responsible for providing advice to ANMM’s Executive on matters relating to naval affairs, liaising with naval stakeholders, and providing advice, support and involvement where appropriate.

The successful candidate will support the Research and Curatorial department to:-

- Develop ANMM’s capacity to establish a leading role in the preservation and interpretation of RAN and/or associated vessels lost during wartime through participation in archaeological surveys, research and training.
- Engage stakeholders and audiences through innovative exhibitions and emerging technologies
- Support the broader activities of ANMM’s maritime archaeology unit by participating in regular diving activities, training and maintaining all relevant qualifications
- Represent ANMM in matters relating to the RAN, the museum’s naval vessels, associated core galleries, the RAN Pavilion and related objects and archives in the National Maritime collection

What we are looking for in you:

We are looking for someone with a passion for Maritime Archaeology and the ability to work collaboratively and effectively to achieve successful project outcomes in a large organisation with multiple competing goals. This role requires exceptional customer engagement, interpersonal and communication skills, and a capacity to introduce innovation to ANMM. You will also be self-motivated with a positive attitude towards your work. We foster a workplace culture of energetic, motivated and passionate team members who take pride in creating their own successes, take ownership of customer problems and are polite, friendly, patient and professional at all times.

Key skills and experience required:

- Extensive diving experience and experience working in the field of maritime archaeology.
- Experience working in a cultural or heritage organisation.
- Well-developed presentation skills across a wide range of media.
- Experience in working effectively with multiple stakeholders. Relevant international experience, including working with cultures outside Western/English-speaking countries would be an advantage.

- Experience in engaging with online audiences via social media, blog posts and other digital platforms.
- Negotiation skills, influencing skills, presentation skills and capacity to communicate effectively and persuasively in writing and in person. Proven ability to produce professional publications.
- Tertiary qualifications in maritime archaeology, history, museum studies or relevant field.
- Australian Diving certification (ADAS) AS 2815.1 or ability to gain such certification rapidly. ADAS AS 2815.2 highly desirable.

Applications Close: 3rd April 2018

Contact Officer: Kieran Hosty on 02 92983710 or click on below link

<http://www.anmm.gov.au/about-us/who-we-are/work-with-us> for more information.

Selection for this position will be made on the basis of relative merit which will be assessed against each item of the selection criteria. Applications that do not address the selection criteria will not be considered for short listing by the Selection Committee.

Notes:

This position is open to all eligible members of the community and we encourage applications from Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people, people with a disability and people from every cultural and linguistic background. To be an eligible member of the community, you must be an Australian citizen. Applications may be accepted from Australian permanent residents who are in the process of acquiring Australian citizenship.

No applications will be accepted by mail or email.