The Sydney Children's Hospitals Network (SCHN) has recently established an Aboriginal Health Unit to support the Aboriginal Health outcomes across SCHN in line with the SCHN Aboriginal Health Strategic Plan 2018/2021.

A key component of the Aboriginal Health Unit Manager role is to oversee the day to day work of the Aboriginal Health Worker Network across both Children's Hospital Westmead and Sydney children's Hospital Randwick.

Reporting to the Aboriginal Health Management Advisor, the role has the opportunity to set the expectation across SCHN, build relationships internally which is integral to ensuring Aboriginal families and communities have access to services that are culturally responsive, holistic and comprehensive, engaging, well-resourced and flexible.

To be successful for this role, you must be of Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander descent, as defined under Section 14 of the Anti-discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), have demonstrated experience in a health-related field, leadership experience, high level understanding of challenges to be addressed in closing the gap in health disparities, intergenerational trauma and how it affects Aboriginal children, young people, their families and their communities.

Most importantly, you will have demonstrated ability to work autonomously, motivate others and have a strong track record of building and maintaining relationships of mutual respect that will enable success in leading the Aboriginal Health Worker Network.

The person appointed to this position will play a critical role in day-to-day services within the hospitals and lead a change of culture which will ensure the services and environment, within the SCHN are culturally responsive and inclusive, enabling equitable health outcomes for Aboriginal children, young people and their families.

Being Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander is a genuine occupational qualification for this position as described under Section 14 (d) of the Anti-Discrimination Act, 1977 (NSW).
