LECTURER IN INDIGENOUS ANTHROPOLOGY

- Undertake high-level anthropology based research
- Initiate, develop and deliver innovative and flexible lectures, seminars and course materials relevant to anthropology and Indigenous anthropology in particular

The ANU College of Arts and Social Sciences (CASS) is the largest single College of seven Colleges at ANU. The College, which is structured into two main research schools, offers degrees in more than 20 discipline areas and excels in research across the creative arts, humanities and social sciences.

A hub of vibrant activity, we host more than 270 lectures, concerts and exhibitions each year, most of which are open to the public. Our students, staff and graduates come from more than 60 nations, bringing a diversity of perspective to campus life.

This position is for someone who will take the lead in developing outstanding and innovative research and teaching projects in the area of Indigenous anthropology. The applicant should have substantive field experience with Indigenous people, preferably in Australia. That experience should be combined with a theoretical interest in at least one of the following fields: environmental anthropology, the anthropology of policy, the anthropology of the state. The applicant will contribute to research-led education in the area of Indigenous anthropology at both upper undergraduate and postgraduate levels. The applicant will also be responsible for teaching a general introduction to anthropology first year course, and contribute to theory and field methods courses for graduate students beyond their speciality.
