

Feel connected while you're away from home

At UQ, you're supported to achieve your dreams while remaining true to who you are.

Making the transition to university can be hard, especially if it means leaving your family, friends and Country.

But as a UQ student, you're part of more than just a cohort—you're also part of a community.

From pre-enrolment through to graduation, you're supported by the Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander

Studies (ATSIS) Unit, the Goorie Berrimpa Indigenous Student Collective, and a large Indigenous student peer group from across the continent.

This thriving community is dedicated to helping you access all you need to succeed at university, including scholarships, study support, student accommodation and social events.

You're always connected to mob and culture when you study at UQ, even if you're away from home.

Your place at UQ is waiting for you.
