

Registered Midwife – Aboriginal Maternal & Infant Health Service

Department: Western Sydney Local Health District

Classification: Registered Midwife

Location: Mount Druitt Hospital

Employment Status: Temporary Full-Time (Up to 12 months)

Enquiries: Belinda Cashman on Belinda.cashman@health.nsw.gov.au

The AMIHS Midwife is responsible for the provision of evidence based and woman-centred maternity care to Aboriginal women, and women having an Aboriginal baby, and their partners and families.

The AMIHS midwife provides high quality care that is underpinned by the 10 principles for primary maternity care to residents of Western Sydney Local Health District (WSLHD). The AMIHS midwife will work in collaboration with the AMIHS Team – Midwife, Aboriginal Health Practitioner & Aboriginal Health Worker; and other Aboriginal Health staff including the New Directions Aboriginal Mothers and Babies Program. The position will also be expected to work collaboratively with antenatal and maternity services across WSLHD.

AMIHS aims to improve access to maternal health services for pregnant Aboriginal women or women having an Aboriginal baby. The AMIHS midwife will provide clinical, cultural, educational and psychological support as well as enhancing the seamless transition to child and family health services and to other agencies as required. Community engagement and community development are also key components of the model. AMIHS is based at the Aboriginal Health Hub on the grounds of Mt Druitt Hospital and reports operationally through Integrated & Community Health.
