AIATSIS is leading a program to secure the return of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples' cultural heritage held overseas to its original custodians and owners or appropriate cultural institutions.

Returning material to country for purposes of cultural revitalisation is a key aspiration of Indigenous communities. The Return of Cultural Heritage (RoCH) program supports the cultural resurgence of Australia's First Nations peoples. This initiative will strengthen the signal both to the nation and globally that Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander culture is respected, celebrated and valued.

The program will rely on expert knowledge as well as strong community engagement and partnerships, and a network of engaged individuals and organisations to achieve its goals.

The Senior Researcher is responsible for the preparation and production of high-quality research, developing reports and other correspondence, assisting with the preparation of official return requests, policy papers and other outputs.

The position supports the Assistant Director and Director to ensure the successful facilitation and negotiation of return requests.

This officer will work in partnership with peak representative bodies and identified communities to understand their requirements in relation to their cultural heritage held overseas, and to build ongoing relationships.

The Senior Researcher supports the Assistant Director and Director to engage with communities to identify relevant material for return, organise return logistics and assist with the organisation of any events or ceremonies to welcome and celebrate returned material.

This role will assist in the development of productive and mutually respectful relationships with international collecting institutions, governments and private collectors.
