

Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander cultural support and liaison worker

Karralika Programs Inc. is a not-for-profit specialist alcohol and other drug organisation that provides programs for people in the Canberra, and surrounding, areas since 1978.

We support adults, young people and families to address and recover from alcohol and other drug problems through a range of residential and community programs.

The roles

This position will provide cultural support to Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander men and women, and their children, who are participating in our programs. The role will actively engage our Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients, assisting them to better connect with their culture, community and history. The role will also liaise with Aboriginal Community Controlled Health Organisations (ACCHOs)/groups, Elders and community leaders, enhancing opportunities to work more closely with, and/or in partnership to better support our clients cultural needs.

This role will work with the current Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander cultural support and liaison worker across all program areas in the ACT. Some activities will be inclusive of non-Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander people participating and working within our programs.
