It is a genuine occupational requirement that this position be filled by an Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander person. One of the referees should be an Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander person who can attest to the applicant's background, knowledge, skills, and experience as they relate to the cultural capabilities.

To be eligible for this position you must have:

- Possession of a tertiary degree relevant to the role such as social work, psychology, behavioural or social science, criminology or other recognised degree as outlined in attached position description under other important information.

Key duties include:

- Delivering best practice statutory casework services to young people through the implementation of a standardised risk assessment tool and intervention skills to develop, facilitate, implement and evaluate culturally appropriate intervention.
- Identifying individual case needs, appropriate programs and services to address those needs and ongoing management of cases to ensure clients have maximum opportunities to address their offending behaviour whilst maintaining positive self-development opportunities for young people in accordance with relevant legislation, policies, practices and procedures.
- Fostering an environment that enables external involvement and access, and internal practices that provide as far as possible for normalised living and working environments in the centre.
- Actively participating in the suicide risk assessment process for young people and ensuring this information and information on specific case management issues are incorporated into a Case Plan for all young people.

If this position is for you, please submit your application today by submitting:

- A cover letter outlining who you are, your strengths and qualifications, and why you are interested in this role.
- A current resume containing details of 2 referees. At least one referee should have a thorough knowledge of your work over the past two years as your manager or supervisor.
- Complete a mandatory questionnaire as part of your Smart Jobs application.
